Optional/General comments	Dear Editor, It was a pleasure to read a manuscript entitled „Total Phenol and Flavonoid Content and Antioxidant Activity of Extract Caulerpa racemosa with Methanol and Ethyl Acetate Solvents from Usaha Jaya Village, Raja Ampat Regency, Southwest Papua Province“. Overall, the manuscript is well written and contains a lot of important data and useful information for readers. In my opinion, the manuscript could be published in Your reputable journal after a few minimal corrections. Abstract is written properly according to instructions of the journal. At the end of the abstract, in one sentence the author should connect the significance of this research with the journal's scope. In my opinion, the Introduction is well written and slowly introduces readers to the research topic. The part Materials and Methods is written down in a very detailed way. I propose here adding a Voucher number for Caulerpa racemosa. Results are described correctly and briefly and clearly shown in figures and tables. Discussion is correctly written. The author explains the obtained results and compares them with the results of other researchers, as far as possible. The Conclusion should be extended (the significance of this paper should be related with the journal's scope). References: Authors should check the reference list. Somewhere they wrote the full name of a journal somewhere abbreviations. It should be correct according to journal instructions.

	Technical errors When you first write the names of species should be written in full and further when they reappear in the text should be written in abbreviations (C. racemosa). For all decimal numbers in the text, tables and figures, write a point and not a comma (for example 3.25 instead of 3,25). In my opinion, the quality of this work is above average. After the recommended changes made, I suggest this manuscript to be published in Asian Journal of Current Research.
